

Embedding Formative Assessment with Teacher Learning Communities

Dylan Wiliam – 6th June 2019

In this one-day workshop, Embedding Formative Assessment with Teacher Learning Communities, for teachers and leaders of all phases of education, Dylan covers:

- Why formative assessment needs to be a continuing priority for every school
- The strategies and techniques of formative assessment (including questioning and feedback)
- How to establish and sustain Teacher Learning Communities to support teachers in improving their classroom practice

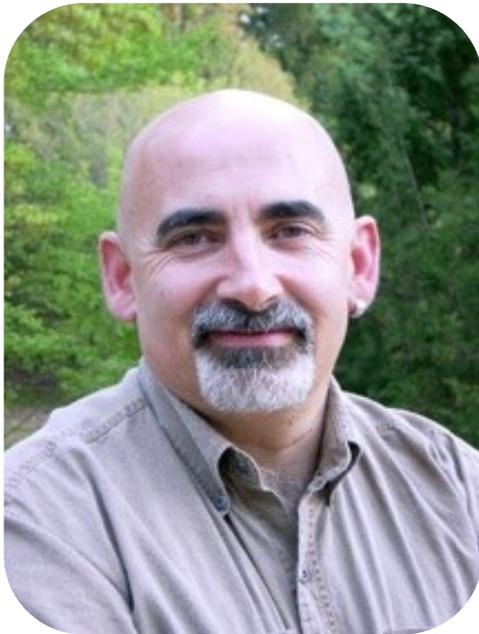

A school's assessment system should be designed to assess the school's curriculum rather than having to design the curriculum to fit the school's assessment system. Since each school's curriculum will be designed to meet local needs there cannot be a one-size fits all assessment system. Each school's assessment system will be different. There are however a number of principles that should govern the design of any assessment system. Learn the key stages of developing an assessment system:

- Selecting a small number of big ideas for each subject
- Creating learning progressions for each of the big ideas
- Identifying key check points in the learning progressions
- Developing assessments for each of the checkpoints

In addition, discover how to judge the quality of assessments, and be introduced to the key principles that should govern recording, reporting and target setting.

Themes for keynotes include:

- How do we prepare young people for a world we cannot imagine
- Teacher quality: what it is, why it matters and how to get more of it
- Principles for curriculum design
- Principles for assessment design
- Assessment: the bridge between teaching and learning
- Stopping people doing good things: the essence of effective leadership
