The Art of Storytelling

Professional Storyteller Craig Jenkins invites teachers to attend 'The Art of Storytelling'; an interactive workshop focusing on the techniques needed to tell stories to children in the classroom.

The workshop will explore the importance of: voice modulation, characterisation, language, gesture, rhythm and expression, as well as offering guidance on how to select stories and to edit/modify story content.

The Art of Storytelling is essential training for teachers who are interested in learning the practical skills of telling stories. Teachers will leave with a wealth of techniques and knowledge that they can immediately put to use in the classroom.

ABOUT

Craig Jenkins is an internationally renowned storyteller having performed in and across London and the world. In late 2018 and early 2019, Craig will be representing England at international storytelling festivals in Romania, South Korea and Kenya.

During his ten-year career, Craig has performed stories for children and their families for the BBC, the British Museum, the British Film Institute, the High Commission of India, as well as sharing stories in countless schools across the UK, community centres, children's hospitals, refugee centres, orphanages, slums (in South India), churches, temples, mosques, festivals and theatres across the world.

FEEDBACK

The workshop was brilliant – informative, engaging and so useful! It has totally changed the way I tell stories in the classroom.

Craig is such a visual and engaging performer with so much experience – his style and guidance helped me to find ways to make the stories more accessible for all of the children in my class

I learnt so much and had so much fun. I wish all training courses were like this!
